Both the Court of Appeals and the Superior Court will adjourn next Monday. The recess will last until September.

The Washington Fire Company will give an ice cream supper and ball to the members on the night of July 3, 1883, at their hall.

MESSRS. NEWELL & HENRY have lately made large sales of their home-roasted coffee at Vanceburg and other points in Lewis county.

MR. HOMER FREDERICK has been employed to build a handsome two-story frame residence for Dr. Hunter, at Washington. The material will be supplied by W. B. Mathews & Co.

SINCE our last report the following additional Justices of the Peace have qualified, viz: Lewis Jefferson, with C. W. Williams surety; O. N. Weaver, with Joseph M. Byar surety, and Thos. Downing, with J. C. Pickett surety.

THERE are four hundred and eleven beacon lights between Pittsburg and Cairo on the Ohio river. The average cost of maintaining each light is $151.06. This includes the total expenses of oil, salary of officers and pay of the lightkeepers.

MESSRS. BLATTERMAN & POWER are the agents in this city for the celebrated "Peerless" and "Giant" ice cream freezers, and are prepared to furnish them at manufacturers' prices. They are warranted to be the best made, and will last a lifetime.

REV. FATHER GOREY, assistant priest at the Cathedral at Covington has been selected to succeed Rev. Father T. P. Ablen, who has been appointed to the charge of St. Augustine Church at that place. He is expected to arrive in Maysville to-day.

IN naming yesterday the ladies who constituted Dr. J. T. Strobe's choir at the cemetery, on Tuesday, we accidentally omitted the name of Miss Carrie Culbertson, whose trained and cultivated voice added much to the charm of the music rendered.

ON account of the bad weather last night the moonlight fete at Amazon Hall was postponed until next Friday evening. There will be good music for dancing and refreshments of all kinds in abundance. The admission is ten cents for gentlemen—ladies free.

THE examining trial of Braxton Carr, Wm. Carr and James Limerick, on a peace warrant, closed on the 13th inst., before Magistrate Wesley Vicroy. They were all required to keep the peace and be of good behavior, the former in the sum of $100 and the two latter in the sum of $50 each.

MESSRS. EGNEW & ALLEN have just brought to the city a large lot of slate and marble mantles which range in price from $17 to $45. They are very handsome, and the prices quoted are low. They also have a full line of the celebrated Minton tiles which are now so popular.

Mrs. F. HARRISON requests the BULLETIN to return her grateful acknowledgments to the Grand Marshal and Aids, Hauckes Reed and Brass band, the Emmet Rifles and her "brothers in arms" for remembering her so kindly on Tuesday afternoon. She regrets that disability prevented her taking a more active part in the decoration arrangements.

THE following officers were elected at a regular meeting of the Washington Fire Company, on the evening of the 13th inst., to serve for the ensuing six months: President—Conrad Rudy. Vice President—H. K. Adamson. Secretary—Byron Rudy. Messenger—Wm. H. Campbell. Chairman Standing Committee—William N. Rudy. Chief Director Hose—C. W. McClanahan. Director H. Clay—Chas. H. Frank. Director Simon Kenton—Fred Bode. First Director Hook and Ladder Wagon—Robert R. Frost. Second Director Hook and Ladder Wagon—Daniel Weaver.

IN a few days the street railroad cars will be upon the track. The streets on each side of the track are cut up in places and obstructed by broken stone which lies in piles along the route. The city authorities should give the matter attention and have the stone spread and the streets made level with the rails. The surface will wear smooth in a few days and make our streets passable and decent. The railroad company have acted with commendable alacrity in the performance of their duty. Now, let the city show the same spirit and perform the part it is required to do.

The Ashland Murder Developments.

The story told by the Cincinnati Enquirer of the work of Detectives Burnett and Norris in hunting down three negroes, who are alleged to be the real murderers of the Gibbons children, is a plausible one and may have a foundation in truth, and if one-half of what is stated can be corroborated, as claimed it can be, it will cause, to say the least, serious complications of the case. If it should be proved that Neal, Ellis and Craft were guilty of the crime in expiation of which one of them has already died and the others are on the road to the gallows, it will be a blow at mob law that will be sensibly felt and appreciated and a terrible lesson to certain misguided people at Ashland and that neighborhood. The Enquirer's story is given in seven columns and is in substance as follows:

Burnett and Norris have from the start held to the idea that the crime was committed by negroes, and with this idea ferreted out the murderers who are alleged to be Wm. Direly, Dabney Jones and Reuben Kendall. A clew having been obtained that pointed to the guilt of Direly, he was closely watched, for several weeks and it was subsequently ascertained that his mother had stated that her son had been in trouble at Ashland and that "some one had been killed and a house burned," but no direct evidence of Direly's guilt could be procured. Finally more light was thrown upon the case by the statement of a colored woman named Henderson who lived at Charleston, West Va., to the effect that Direly had told her and another colored woman named Emma Twine something of a murder. This woman later made a sworn statement that Direly had given a bracelet to Emma Twine and had said that he was at the Gibbons house the night of the murder and had violated the person of one of the girls. A statement similar in effect was made by Emma Twine and sworn to in the presence of witnesses. Direly having disappeared the search for him was ineffectual, until very recently he was found to be at Portsmouth, Ohio. A trusted colored man who knew Direly was sent by Detective Burnett to Portsmouth to see him. He met Direly there and went with him to his boarding house, where after brief intimacy he obtained from Direly a confession which is given as follows:

The first of it was that evening at a saloon in Ashland. Two certain men met him there and proposed to go up to Gibbons' for improper intimacy with the girls. I left them and did not think they meant it," said he. "But they came to my shanty after it was late. Mary Minor and others were in there. They told me to come on; so I went out and saw them before dressing and then went back and dressed and put on my rubber boots and went up there. They went in first, and I watched. When they got in the little boy jumped up and said they were not going to do anything like that. Then the big one hit the cradle on the head with an ax, and he fell over on his face under the stairs near the closet. After they were in awhile I got tired waiting and started in with them. The boy and least girl were dead, and the big one was sitting on the floor near the corner with her head on her hand, and was much scared and excited. I told her what I wanted. She said no, and fought me, but I succeeded twice. And then the other two came back, and we got out of the closet and finished the job, and they were fixed so as to leave no trace. We went up above town to the bridge and fixed it to say nothing, and then I skipped across the field and ran next to the river home. I saw one of them at the bar-room next day. They asked me what I was going to do about it, so I concluded not to stay there any longer. I walked to Huntington and took the train to Charleston. Alf Burnett had me up, and I had a notion of giving the whole thing away. I told some money, a gold ring and a bracelet on the floor. I kept the money, and gave the bracelet to Emma Twine and the ring to Mary Jane Miller. The bracelet is brass, with a white woman's head on it and is cracked. George Ellis is a liar and ought to have been hung, for there was not a white man in it. They were gentlemen, though. There was a in jail was innocent, but the detective was smart enough to catch the right men."

A bracelet which is said to answer the description was afterward obtained from Emma Twine and is believed to have been the one taken on the night of the murder from the Gibbons residence. The detective's agent then went to Huntington to see if he could get the ring from the Miller girl. He managed to see it and ascertain that it was exactly as had been described to him, but was afraid to push the matter too close and failed to get possession of it. He afterwards joined Direly, who was working as a coal carrier at Columbus, Ohio, and one night learned from him that one of his accomplices was Dabney Jones, but the other he refused to name. He also admitted that the towel that had been identified as Neal's was his own, and that the mate to it, together with a bloody shirt, was in a satchel in the possession of Mary E. Sims, at Charleston. The valise was subsequently taken away by Direly. Reuben Kendall, the detective's claim, was afterwards by unquestionable evidence, identified as the third party in the murder. Direly was arrested at Columbus on the 12th, and the other two men are under the eyes of the police.

How Neal and Craft Received the News.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 13.—A reporter went to the jail this morning to see Neal and Craft. He found them in the inner corridor, Craft sitting on a box reading to-day's Enquirer. He had finished and arose smiling. He grasped the hand of the reporter and said: "I knew the truth would come out some day. My conscience is clear. I can stand on the gallows and protest my innocence. I am as clear of that crime as a babe. I don't know either Direly, Jones or Kendall. There are a good many men there I didn't know."

Neal appeared pleased also. He said he knew the truth would come out.

Meeting of Ex-Confederates.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Confederate Survivors' Association of Northeastern Kentucky, held the 13th inst., the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of our Association are due, and they are hereby tendered, to the Emmet Rifles, to the Joe Heiser Post, J. A. K. to the Boone's Regiment and to the citizens of our city and county generally for their interest, manifestation, and for their aid rendered in our recent Confederate memorial service.

Resolved, That our thanks are due to Rev. J. C. Frank and Rev. Mr. Pettis, of the assistance they rendered to the ceremony, and to General R. M. G. on and commended to P. L. New for their able and eloquent address.

Resolved, That to Major Henry F. Stanton the "poet laureate" of Kentucky for the sweetly touching song prepared for him expressly, on the occasion, the Association feels a profound sense of gratitude. "T. de Gaulle" that "shone" received no fairer a wreath than the graceful tribute laid upon his grave by himself.

Resolved, That Dr. Strobe and his successors, our Association is indebted to its obliging for the beautiful and appropriate music rendered by them, and hereby offers to them its heartfelt thanks.

This grand, heroic feature: That teaches man to love his kind And elevates his nature; That makes him like the drop of dew That rests upon the flower; Or perfect form, of rainbow hue, The diamond of his hour.

Resolved, That our thanks are tendered to the BULLETIN for its gratuitous services and to the city press for their complimentary notices.

FRANK M. ATKINSON'S grave on decoration day attracted special admiration and attention for artistic skill and beauty in arrangement it could scarcely be excelled. An exquisite canopy of flowers covered the entire resting place, above which was an upright wreath symbolizing, unending love for the departed. In the center of the wreath was a beautiful Southern magnolia, representing the South for which he died, directly under the arch swung a lovely basket of flowers with the words: "To the memory of one whom everybody loved." On the grave beneath, every imaginable design was found, consisting of an elegant harp, its golden strings and all made of delicate flowers; a lovely star which deft fingers must have handled; a massive cross with the words of a comrade: "To the memory of F. M. Atkinson, First Lieutenant, C. S. A. A nobler, truer heart never ceased to beat." There was a perfect sickle and sheaf representing the cutting down of life and the ingathering, a beautiful plaque composed entirely of white and pink flowers, a wreath and cross of scarlet flowers. Upon the stone was fastened a solid anchor of white rosebuds. Just across the head of the grave was the initials, "F. M. A." in the most exquisite and delicate white flowers. There were loose flowers scattered all around the grave in profusion, and many designs which we could not see as they were so densely crowded. Suspended from the canopy were the words: "Gone, but never forgotten."

10 OUR FRIENDS.

There never was a bird or flower, But what it had its mate, We never knew a pleasant hour, But that we had to wait.

The rain, mud, storm and flood, Are things we clearly hate, Especially when the weather fair, With having our Moonlight Fete.

If living hope and constant prayer Will help us in our plight, We'll hope and pray for weather fair, And have it every night.
